

How to become successful in life

What features need to have for the modern person to be successful? How to teach children to live without pressure, to make decisions and take responsibility for the consequences?

New York is one of the best private schools in Riverdale, which is 105 years. Graduates of this institution easily enter prestigious American universities: Harvard, Yale, Princeton. The Director of this school is a 50-year-old Dominic Randolph. At the end of last year, this eccentric man has stirred up the Western world of science and education, questioning the modern system of knowledge assessment.

D. Randolph explained that most school tests, you can successfully write without learning the given material. It's enough to have a high level of intelligence and basic logical thinking. We all remember the phrase: "Teachers give us a ticket into the adult world". But is it? Asks D. Randolph. In the modern world the most important task is to instill in students strong character.

Randolph began a large-scale study "strong character." What features need to have for the modern person write my essay for me to be successful? He brought to his study of dozens of psychologists, teachers, and also took legal advice. Together they carefully studied Socrates, Confucius, and other philosophers.

The final list of new features related to a person with a strong character, was as follows: energy (lust for life, the ability to feel alive and happy), stability (the ability to finish the job), self-control (control your emotions), social intelligence (knowing what people need, their interests), gratitude (for all the good that happens in life), interest (the desire to open and learn something new), optimism (peaceful feeling that everything will turn out).

Psychologists have developed, at first glance, a simple test of the 12 theses, each student need to answer "Yes" or "no". For example, "I bring to the end the begun business", "Even when I can't do something, I know what to do next." Based on these tests it became clear what features should be developed or, conversely, to control a particular student, using a specially developed technique.

The result was amazing. According to the headmaster of Riverdale, all students became much more uninhibited and more confident to behave in the classroom, to actively discuss the topics. Thus, the students, developing strong character traits become self-assured, self-reliant and no longer dependent on the opinions of teachers. The only way children learn to live without pressure, to make decisions and take responsibility for the consequences.

D. Randolph: "When you work in a private school, you always have to remember that you don't work for children, as it should be, and their parents who pay a lot of money for tuition. So when you say that your students lack the self-control or perseverance, it means that you criticize their parents!"

D. Randolph says the strong character which helped him to succeed, he was not at Harvard. "Endurance and self-control is what we receive when we suffer a defeat," says D. Randolph, explaining that in the modern system of education, we finally received the certificate, and, therefore, defeats in the academic system does not exist. Of course, he wants his students became successful and so he teaches them to be able to take a beating.

Such systems adhere to some modern young people. In recent years the trend when the youth refused to study, particularly in prestigious universities of Harvard or Cambridge, considering it inappropriate and unjustified. Young people, mainly from Europe and North America. They are fluent in two or three foreign languages, highly educated, highly spiritual, can support any conversation: from the events of the Arab spring to the diet of Angelina Jolie.

It's selfless people who see money only as a means of helping the needy, not afraid of hard physical labor and work, are tolerant towards all people, leading a healthy lifestyle. We can all see what the modern world is cynical, brutal. But despite this, each of us wants to live in a beautiful world of successful people that do not have an ego and morbid ambitions.

The fact that such a world can be build with a very different, new look on life. The man who does not lose itself in the modern information flow, which is moving at high speed. A man of character.
